This research was aimed to criticize the law enforcement of cyber bullying crime and it’s inhibiting factors in Indonesia. The research was focused on law enforcement according to KUHP and Undang-undang No. 11 Tahun 2008 about electronic information and transaction. Applying qualitative method and normative-empiric juridical approach, this research was held in Directorate of Special Crime of Jakarta Metropolitan Regional Police Headquarter and Forensic Laboratory of the National Police Headquarters, and involved advocates and academy.

The result found that the criminal of cyber bullying in Indonesia could be punished according to the KUHP and UU Nomor 11 Tahun 2008 about electronic information and transaction. Less publication of that statue, lack of knowledge in law enforcement agent level and insufficiency of forensic laboratory have become inhibiting factors in enforcing the law.
