The Good Stepmother

The old witch locked Hansel in a cage and set Gretel to clean the house. She planned to eat them both. Each night the children cried and begged the witch to let them go.

Meanwhile, at home, their stepmother was beginning to wish she had never tried to get rid of the children. "I must find them," she said and set off into the forest.

Many hours later, when her feet were tired from walking and her lips were dry from thirst, she came to the cottage belonging to the witch. The stepmother peeped through the window. Her heart cried out when she saw two children.

She picked up the broom leaning against the door and crept inside. The witch was putting some stew in the oven when the stepmother gave her an almighty push. The witch fell into the oven and the stepmother shut the door.

"Children, I have come to save you." She said, hugging them tightly. I have done dreadful thing. I hope in time you will forgive me. Let me take you home and become a family again. Jack and the Beans

Once upon a time there was a boy named Jack, who lived with his mother in a small village. They were very poor and their only possession was a cow, which gave them milk, an old axe, which hung on the wall their house.

One day his mother said to Jack, "We are so poor we must sell the cow. You must take it to the market and sell it to buy food."

So Jack took the cow and set off to market. On his way there he met old man who offered to exchange Jack's cow for some beans. Jack said, "my mother will be very angry with me if I don't take back money. We need to buy food."

"Don't worry", replied the old man. "These are no ordinary beans. They are magic beans, and they will bring you good luck!"

Jack felt sorry for the old man, for he looked even poorer than Jack, and so he agreed to exchange the cow for the magic beans.

"You are a kind boy", said the old man, "You will be well rewarded." when he got home and told his mother what he had done, she was very angry.

"You stupid boy", she shouted. "You have sold our most valuable possession for a handful of beans. And she threw the beans out of window.

The next day, when Jack woke up, there, in the garden, where his mother had thrown the beans, was a huge beanstalk. It was as thick as a tree and so tall it seemed to go right up into the sky. Jack stared and stared at the beanstalk, and remembered the old man's words. Taking his axe, he began to climb up the beanstalk. Up and up he climbed. For many hours he kept climbing until, at last, he could see the top of the beanstalk, asleep on the ground, was a huge ugly giant. And in front of him lay a heap of treasure. There were gold and silver coins, and piles of precious jewels. Very quietly as so not to make the giant woke up, Jack started to fill his coat pockets with the giant's treasure.

Just as Jack had taken all he could carry, the giant opened one eye and saw Jack, "Who are you?" he roared. He opened the other eye, and then he stood up. Jack could hardly see his head it was so far away. He turned and ran and started to climb down the beanstalk as fast as he could. The giant strode after him, and Jack felt sure he was about to die!

But as the giant was about to reach down and grab Jack, Jack remembered the axe. He swung it backwards and then, as hard as he could, he chopped into the beanstalk just above his head. Again and again he chopped until, at last, at the top of the beanstalks crashed down out of the sky, carrying the giant with it. With a loud roar he disappeared and fell to earth. And Jack climbed safely down the beanstalk carrying enough jewels to look after his mother and himself for the rest of his life.

Duck and Turtle

Two ducks that lived in a big lake had a friend who was a turtle. One year there was a very little rain and the lake began to dry up. One of the ducks said to the other, "Soon, there'll be no water in this lake. Let's go and look for lake."

"Yes," answered the second duck, "But first let's say good bye to our friend, the turtle." When they told the turtle they were going to leave, he said, "I'll die here without any water and without any friends. Take me with you."

"The ducks answered, "We can't. We are going to fly, and you have no wings."

"The turtle thought for a minute and then said, "please wait here."

Then he went away and found a strong, straight stick. He brought it back to his friends, put the middle of it in his mouth and said, "Now if each of you takes me one end of the stick in his mouth, you can lift me up and carry me with you."

“That is dangerous,” said the ducks, “if you try to talk while we’re carrying you through the air, you won’t be able to hold the stick, so you’ll fall down along way and break your shell.”

“all right,” answered the turtle, “I promise not to talk while we’re in the air. So the ducks took the stick and flew away, with the turtle between them. All went well until they were flying over a town. Then some people saw them and shouted, “Look, those ducks are carrying a cat!” The turtle got very angry, “A cat?
