The existence of juvenile complaints against the parents, especially complaints relating to the implementation of the functions of their parents, is that they are holding the background for this study. With so are the problems in this study which is like a teenager in the execution of the function of the desire of their parents, and the purpose of this study was to determine the adolescents desire tentang implementation of the functions of their parents.

The population in this study were 158 men with the status as a student Diponegoro SMK Tanjung Bintang. The sampling technique used in this study is proportional simple random sampling. By taking 100% of the population of 16 people found the young men as a sample of this study. Data collection techniques with structured interviews, documentation, and decisions. The method used is descriptive, and analysts use qualitative and quantitative analysis.

The results of these studies show that teens want parents to exercise its functions as a parent, that is the function of affective, socialization, education, recreation, relegius, protection, and economic functions. In performing these functions, teenage parents do not want the view that a certain function is more important than other functions. In performing these functions, teenagers want their parents to develop two-way communication between them and their parents, so parents can understand their feelings and their desires, and they also understand the feelings and desires of parents. In performing these functions, teens want the love of parents towards their embodied in attention, and caring parents always underlies the implementation of these functions.
