Quality health services is one of the basic necessities required for each person. PHC as health care providers become one of the patient for treatment. Prescribing and use of drugs is one of the major mainstay of health services at the health center. Giving information about the consumption of drugs is essential to cure the patient. Unfortunately most of the people go wrong in applying the techniques and time consumption of drugs, such as antacids drugs directly taken without chewing the time before and after eating as a result morbidity and mortality due to this disease continues to grow. This study aims to determine the suitability of current drug delivery techniques and gastritis in adult patients in health centers Inpatient Kemiling Bandar Lampung.

This research uses descriptive method retrospectively. The population in this study throughout the medical records of patients with a diagnosis of gastritis on January 1 to December 31, 2013. Total sampel in this study of 100 people with techniques sampling with random sampling method. Suitability technique and drug delivery gastritis time measured through medical records.

From the research results be obtained 100% write prescriptions that are not clearly the type of preparation of drugs and drug consuming technique and there is a 20% write prescriptions time of drug administration, while 80% did not write the prescription of current time of drug administration.

Conclusion there are techniques accuracy and low time of drug use gastritis based medical record in Inpatient Health Center Kemiling Bandar Lampung

Keywords: Drugs, gastritis, precision, services.