The main challenge of development is to improve the quality of life. Especially in countries with the poorest, a better quality of life implies the existence of a higher income. But it required not only that. Higher income is only one of the many conditions that must be fulfilled. One of the goals of economic development in the framework of national development in order to reduce the gap between the rich and the poor. To overcome the problem of poverty that happened, needing the government intervention to help the poor out of poverty.

It required changes in systemic and comprehensive poverty reduction efforts. To improve the effectiveness of poverty reduction and employment creation, the government launched a program PNPM-MP. This program is conducted to further encourage efforts to increase the quality of life, welfare and self-reliance in rural communities.

The purpose of this writing to know that the program well targeted, timely, and appropriate amount, and evaluate the practice of Savings and Loans Women grant (SPP) PNPM program on Gadingrejo subdistrict, Pringsewu Regency for the future much better.

Evaluation of PNPM SPP with the case of study in the District Gadingrejo using primary data through questionnaires and interviews with PNPM officers and community SPP loan beneficiaries in the Gadingrejo subdistrict.

Based on the research implementation of the SPP program has been implemented effectively assessed by several indicators in accordance with the technical implementation guidelines that have been defined by the program. PNPM implementation of SPP in Gadingrejo subdistrict from year to year was considered successful or progressing. This is consistent with the vision of the PNPM-MP is the achievement of prosperity and independence of the rural poor. Welfare means has been able to organize themselves to mobilize resources to those in their environment, able to access resources outside the environment, and manage these resources to overcome the problem of poverty. Assistance from the government has been able to help the

It is expected that the program runs each year to continue to provide benefits to the community to help their businesses and increase revenue so as to create social welfare area.
