Homosexual still becomes the sensitive topic among the society. It is because there is still pros and cons towards homosexual, in religion life and social and culture life. Concerning about homosexual in this country, it is hard for them to accept their abnormality because the society judge it as something wrong so they hide their gay identity. This kind of condition will be negative thing to their life so it will appear as stress, depression and dysfunctional social relation from this case we need to have further investigation about point of view from students as one of part of society toward homosexual in Bandar Lampung. Where the point of view experience of object, event, or relation gotten by concluding information and interpreting the message. The problem of this research is how the point of view of student of Sociology and Political Science Faculty University of Lampung toward homosexual is.

In this research the writer uses quality approach, by using case study, because the case study is a scientifically finding information by investigating happening event in real life. The method used is based on the fact that investigated concept is natural behavior that is appeared and influenced by phenomenon or real event, and not the country. The research location is in Sociology and Political Science Faculty, Lampung university. The result of this research shows that students of FISIP Unila have enough knowledge about homosexual in Bandar Lampung. This can be known from knowledge, characteristic, and the cause of homosexual in general. And the attitude of students of FISIP Unila toward homosexual of are similar. From this case, where almost all of the source decide to act normally in dealing with the gay people. However, some of them are afraid and make a distance in interacting directly with gay people, where the fearless appears because of the point of the view that homosexual is caused of environment factors or social intercourse.
