

ABSTRACT

Analysis of Economic Structure and Income Distribution in Tulang Bawang 2009-2013

By

Gladi Merisa

This study aims to identify and analyze how the structure of the economy and income distribution in Tulang Bawang in 2009-2013. As known as an adequate economy structure with all of the services sector can play an active role in the growth of the economy can support the development of a region moving towards better and expected the equitable distribution of income.

This research uses analytical methods Shift Share to see the growth sectors of the economy and the Gini index analysis and the Lorentz curve to see the distribution of income distribution in Tulang Bawang regency. The results showed that the structure of the economy in Tulang Bawang regency is still dominated by the agricultural sector, people in this district is still heavily dependent on the agricultural sector. The primacy of the agricultural sector does not provide a great inequality in the communities in the district, according to the analysis results Gini index of income distribution in the district is distributed evenly or have a small imbalance.

Keywords: Economic Structure, Income Distribution, Shift Share, Gini Index