ABSTRACT

This research is a study that aims to determine the influence of democracy, government effectiveness and investment on gross domestic product (GDP) in countries that are members of the OECD. This study uses a population of OECD countries that have 34 member countries. The results of the study using panel data regression prove that democratic and government effectiveness variables have a positive and statistically significant effect on GDP, besides the results of the study also prove that investment variables positively influence GDP in OECD countries but are not significant, thus the hypothesis who stated that the alleged investment had an effect on GDP in the OECD-affiliated countries, was rejected.
