Protection for witnesses and victims is an important element in efforts to deal with victims of criminal acts of protection of Indonesian migrant workers. Sexual, psychological, physical violence as well as material and immaterial losses are one form of impact felt by victims. Victims of crimes against the protection of Indonesian migrant workers in the case discussed by the author are entitled to compensation in the form of restitution for loss of income or wealth, suffering, medical expenses or psychological treatment and other losses suffered by victims. Restitution is a victim's right that must be fought for as a form of responsibility of the perpetrator for the impact and losses caused. The formulation of the problem in this study is whether restitution can be applied to suspects charged with the criminal act of protecting Indonesian migrant workers and how the mechanism for submitting restitution in the case of criminal acts of protecting Indonesian migrant workers.

This research is a normative juridical and empirical juridical type research with a research focus on the study of several opinions through the method of interviews with Prosecutors at the Lampung High Prosecutor's Office, Judges at the Tanjung Karang Class IA District Court, the Witness and Victim Protection Agency (LPSK) of the Republic of Indonesia and literature studies. This research was conducted at the Lampung High Prosecutor's Office. The data sources obtained by the author are obtained through primary data and secondary data consisting of primary legal materials, secondary legal materials and tertiary legal materials. Furthermore, the data that has been collected is processed by data processing and then interpreted using qualitative data analysis.

The results showed that to apply restitution in a criminal case for the protection of Indonesian migrant workers on behalf of the defendant Lulis Widianingrum Binti Supomo with decision number 376/Pid.Sus/2022/PN Tjk was carried out based on several considerations from the Public Prosecutor and the Panel of Judges who decided the case. The request for restitution is the most important form of legal protection for Indonesian migrant workers who are victims, in addition to the perpetrators getting criminal law.
