

ABSTRACT

Judicial Review of Implementation Forced Money (Dwangsom) and Administrative Sanctions In the State Administrative Court's Decision

by

Ivo Pardamean Simanjuntak

Administrative dispute resolution administrative nature is a procedure that can be taken by a person or body of civil law if he is not satisfied with the decision of the state administration. The number of administrative decisions which have not been followed by officials of the state administration due to lack of strength executorial in Act No. 5 of 1986 About the State Administrative Court. In Act No. 9 of 2004 Section 116 verse (4) About the State Administrative Court, if the defendant does not willing to implement the decision of the state administration which has obtained permanent legal force against the concerned officials charged forceful measures in the form of payment of a sum money forced and or administrative sanctions. Forced Money is one of the pressure that person or parties who was sentenced to obey or carry out the sentence.

The problems under study is how the implementation of the decision of the administrative court against the forced money, and how the implementation of the decision of the administrative court against the administrative sanctions. Approach to the problem used in this research is a normative approach. The source of the data in this study are primary data derived from the research literature through legislation, literature, books and official documents.

The results showed that the implementation of the decision of the administrative court against the forced money necessary implementing regulations in the form of government regulations that govern the procedures and mechanisms of compulsory payments, the amount of money forced, and the imposition of forced money, and enforcement of the administrative court to require administrative sanctions implementing regulations regarding the type of administrative sanctions which can be imposed on public officials who are not willing to implement the decision of the administrative court.

Keywords: Forced Money, administrative sanctions, the State Administrative Decision