

ABSTRACT

Talking about prison in indonesia , today we know the term a penal institution (lapas) .A correctional institution is a place guidance for an inmate or the workers of iniquity .The guidance in the form of moral guidance that is the formation of ethics and relations fellow by a convict .To the process of guidance , communication that easily understandable is one of his that must be controlled by an officer who will provide guidance on an inmate at a a correctional institution .The purpose of this research is described the role of communication interpersonal officers by a convict in forming positiveness for prison inmates away .This study using methods qualitative descriptive .Informants in this research taken with using a technique (deliberate) purposive which is the number of informants 6 people . Communication theory in this research adopting both the perspective of humanistic namely openness , empathy , support attitude , positive attitude and a change in attitude and equality theory put forward by kelman namely that is the willingness , identification , and internalization .To seek out new information in the form of interviewing informants , observation and the literature study .Where that the quality of a good communication interpersonal compounded by the role of the social process of the functions which is interwoven between the officers inmate and , able to help in the process of forming positiveness convicts , in order to form a good part of the society , licentious and dedicated high for her life

.Keywords : The aspect of humanistic, the theory of a change in attitude kelman, the formation of attitude